Yep, I had several of the same thoughts.

Yes, I am sitting here pondering this as we speak....

The $1B Question is HOW could it impact? Actually cause them to re-open their cancer review and do their own in-depth Epid evaluation? This is getting huge after what we heard on our call this morning.....

Re IARC, precisely what we didn't want to hear about impact, eh?

All:

Spoke to EPA:

They delayed the PC because they are still addressing some things for human health (breast milk) as well as monarchs.

They are interested in our breast milk assay- what's the status? When could we meet w them to discuss?

They are interested in anything we can supply re monarchs, and we are working on this now. I imagine we could meet with them next month to properly characterize glyphosate's impact as well as our plans to increase populations.

IARC- they are sending delegates (trying to get names) that are knowledgeable re gly from EDSP and oncogenicity standpoint. The findings by IARC would likely be impactful on their analyses.

Finally, I don't think the PC would start until the end of FEB at the earliest, more likely March.

Thanks
